

FORTNIGHTLY CLUB IS NOW AT 30 YEAR MARK Organized to Unite Wives of the Faculty—Now Has 300 Members.

The Fortnightly Club is thirty years old. It was the first women's club in Columbia to become a member of the National Federation of Women's Clubs. Nearly all of the charter members were present at its first meeting of the year which was held this month.

In 1892 the Fortnightly Club, with Mrs. R. H. Jesse as the first president, was organized to unite the wives of the faculty members in a closer relationship. It met at private homes and was originally a "Shakespeare club." "Coriolanus" was the first play to be read. Papers were also contributed.

Since then the programs have been varied, dealing especially with problems of interest to university women. Topics of civic, political, and hygienic importance are discussed. Musicals and house demonstration work are also given. The membership now includes about 300, those eligible being faculty members or wives of faculty members or administrative heads, those connected with the University High School, the Elementary School and the library staff.

SPURNS FORTUNE TO WED Musician Promised Daughter $100,000 and Violin.

By United Press.
Boston, Oct. 20.—"Paul is worth a million," declared pretty Mrs. Paul White, who gave up a fortune of $100,000 and a $20,000 violin to marry Paul White, young composer and teacher at the Boston Conservatory of Music.

Bohemian Kryn, noted musician of Chicago, had promised his daughter $100,000 and the violin if she would not marry until she was 30 years old.
